

Ask Season For Archer-Hunters

ALBUQUERQUE, Aug. 27 (AP) — The Albuquerque Game Protective Association wants a special season for bow and arrow deer hunters in the Sandia mountain game refuge.

Recommendations for an open season for archers coinciding with the regular deer season, No. 1-15, were voted by the association last night upon receiving reports 1,250 deer abounded in the preserve and were over browsing.

The association thought a season for archers would reduce the number about 150, possibly limiting the number of licenses to that number.

The group recommended against a pheasant shooting season this fall because of losses due to the spring rains and floods.
